EDUCATION IN IRELAND.

CLAIMS OF SECONDARY TEACHERS.

PUBLIC MEETING IN DUBLIN. A public meeting of the members of the Association of Secondary Teachers and their sympathisers and supporters was held in the Mansion House, Dublin, on Saturday evening for the purpose of discussing Ireland's claim to adequate financial provision for her secondary education. education.

The Lord Mayor (Alderman L. O'Neill) presided over a large attendance, including representatives of the three Irish Universities, and the Catholic and Protestant Headmasters' Associations.

the Catholic and Protestant Headmasters' Associations.

Letters of apology were received from:—
The Archbishop of Dublin, Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly, Bishop of Canea; Sir John Lonedale, M.P.;
Sir E. Carson, M.P.; the Archdeacon of Dublin;
Dr Starkle, P.C.; Serjeant Sullivan, K.C.; Lord
Justice Molony, Mrs. Alice Stopford Green, Dr.
Kingsmill Moore, Messrs. W. M. Murphy, T. M.
Healy, M.P.; J. Brady, M.P.; A. W. Samuels,
M.P.; J. P. Boland, M.P.; John Dillon, M.P.; J.
J. Clancy, M.P.; John Redmond, M.P.; R.
Jones (Academical Institution, Belfast); Geo.
Fletcher, and The McGillicuddy of the Recks-all expressing sympathy with the objects of the meeting.

Lord Haldane wrote:—

Lord Haldane wrote:

What seems to me to be of the first importance is that the leaders of opinion in your country should think out, and put before the country, a scheme which will treat Irish educational problems as integral parts of one complete whole, dominated from the top by a high educational ideal, the influence of which will penetrate right down to elementary education. The key to this is the reorganisation of the teaching profession.

Given a corps of teachers, properly trained and paid, with a definite scheme to carry into effect, there is little reason to fear that they will not succeed. Ethical, religious, and material ideals are not inconsistent. They all belong to that larger whole which is the only sufficient explanation of a national system of education. And the teachers, sleeped in the consciousness of those ideals, must distribute their work. The University influence is most important in the training of as many of them as it can be brought to bear on.

The ideals are being shaped over here in a fashion which it will be useful for Irishmen to study: Ireland must work them out so as to accord with her own instincts and necessities.

Sir Samuel Dill wrote:

I have long felt that it is a public scandal that Irish secondary teachers should have to work for their present salaries, and any effort to secure large remuneration has my warnest sympathy. published a report on the fighting of the past week which improves upon the model of recent German communiqués. The true turn to carry the burden of war costs for character of the Allies' action is an endeavour, by localised operations, to master outlying positions of the enemy's lines before proceeding to an attack on their main positions, which are of enormous natural strength. Thus on the left, in the Cerna bend east of Monastir, in the Cerna bend east of Monastir, Russian and Italian forces have taken soveral lines of trenches. In the mountains between the Cerna and the Vardar the Serbians are scaling the heights foot by foot. West of the Vardar the French, who have Venezelist troops on their loft, have carried a hill position.

Finally on the right, between the Vardar and Lake Doiran, the British troops are gradually working their way forward and upward. These are the actions of which the Bulgarians tell us that "in general the battles on the Maccelonian front exceeded in extent and violence all previous battles." They lay particular stress on the weight of the artillery fire, which "reached an intensity unknown until now." We have learned from the experience of German communiqués couched in such terms that the employment of language of this sort by the enemy means the cultivation of opinion with two objects—the minimising of Allied successes and preparation for an impending retirement. We may well believe, however, that the Allies in Maccedonia have not opened their offensive until they were able to bring an unprecedented weight of fire to bear upon the enemy. In this theatre, even more then enemy. In this theatre, even more the enemy. In this theatre, even more the enemy. In this theatre, even more then on the western front, effective artillery preparation is the indispensable condition of victory. These are the circumstances in which the Ministry of Munitions addresses a gravo warning to the munitions warns them that our recent successes involve increased demands for rapid delivery of supplies, and that, unless they are forthcoming in large for the communities, will take place at the form and the for rapid delivery of supplies, and that, unless they are forthcoming in large for the committee, will take place at the form and the for rapid delivery of supplies, and the proposition of the committee, will take place at t Russian and Italian forces have taken several lines of trenches. For these important advantages we shall have to wait a while, for they will not be gained without very heavy fighting.

But the Prime Minister's oratory is not of the kind that is provided or prompted by notes, and whatever form the speech might appear in will lack the fire of his spoken word. Perhaps, it would be as well to leave it a memory to his listeners. It is rumoured that the speeches indulged in by members during the secret session were extremely good, particularly that of Mr. Winston Churchill.

As far as at present arranged, Thursday is to see the production of the Government's scheme concerning Home Rule, but the possibility of another postponement is by no means remote. Further details which are now available concerning last night's attacks on the battle front confirm the success of our operations.

Yesterday evening considerable bodies of the enemy, were observed massing for a counterative in the neighbourhood of Bullecourt, They were effectively dealt with by our artillery, and the hostile attack did not develop.

Later in the night our troops attacked, and after heavy fighting lasting throughout the night have to-day established themselves in the village of Aullecourt, where fighting still continues.

PETROGRAD, SATURDAY.

M. Albert Thomas, French Minister of Munitions, was received this afternoon by the Executive Committee of the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates.

After having been cordially greeted by M. Cheidse, the President of the Committee, M. Thomas was invited to give his views on the present political situation, on the war, and on the acts of the International Socialists. In a speech which lasted no less than two hours and a quarter M. Thomas indicated what French public opinion expected from new Russia. France, he said, had at times been anxious as regards the assistance which Russia might give. The hopes of French Democrats were that new Russia would give France her unreserved help.

Crisp Brown Fried Bread like the kiddies like says Mr. 'Chef. You should hear the kiddies clamour for Betzolized Fried Bread. It's so crisp and brown that when it's spluttering in the pan they can hardly contain themselves. Just like every other food that's Betzolized-it's simply splendid. Here's the recipe:

Fried Bread.

Put some Betzol Gravy Powder into a dish, add boiling water until liquid is quite brown, cut some bread in slices fairly thick, heat frying pan, grease with a little bit of dripping or margarine, dip bread in liquid and fry until crisp.

With beef, mutton, pork or poultry-stew or roast-Betzol is the complete gravy maker. Needs no salt, flour or browning.

TO THE EDITOR of The IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—May I cflor u new suggestion which seems to me to afford a basis of agreement among reasonable men of all putries? I know that nothing will placate some finen, but I remember the old teaching that, if you satisfy the reasonable men, you can afford to override the opposition of the unreasonable.

In outline my suggestion is to bring the Home Rule Act into operation speedily, subject to the following emendations:—

(1) If desired by the majority of the adult population of any compact part of Ireland of reasonable size, the Act will not immediately apply to that part except in as far as it gives powers to the Irish Parliament as regards private bills and public works. All other legislation affecting such differentiated part shall continue within the province of the Imperial Parliament. The boundary will be separated from the part with which it desires to be included unless such separation be necessary to make a practical boundary free from prominent irregularities, it being laid down beforehand that the beauth of the proportion of the superasion be necessary to make a practical boundary free from prominent irregularities, it being laid down beforehand that the beauth of the proportion irregularities, it being laid down beforehand that the beauth of the proportion irregularities, it being laid down beforehand that the beauth of the proportion irregularities, it being laid down beforehand that the beauth of the proportion of the province of the Imperial Parliament.
